

Clinical Assistant Professor

Department of Counseling and Human Development Services

The Department of Counseling and Human Development Services at the University of Georgia invites applications for a Clinical Faculty position with expertise in Counseling Psychology to begin August 2020.

Counseling Psychology is the discipline responsible for teaching clinical supervision and the coursework related to the practice of psychotherapy for graduate students in Counseling Psychology and Clinical Mental Health Counseling. The successful candidate will teach courses in the Counseling Psychology doctoral program and the Clinical Mental Health Counseling Masters program with a typical semester load of three (3) courses as well as assisting with program management. Summer teaching opportunities may be available from year to year, contingent on student enrollment and funding availability.

Clinical faculty members in our department are full-time 9-month (academic year) faculty members who have a strong academic background, professional experience in counseling/psychotherapy, and a commitment to the development of graduate student clinicians and/or researchers. Clinical faculty members are typically renewed annually, and the clinical faculty line allows promotions in rank. As with all faculty positions in the department, clinical faculty engage in scholarly activities, and engage in service to the department, the University and the profession.
